

How we work

*The Committee is aware that there are a broader range of threats to cetaceans, including cetacean diseases, marine energy developments, intentional killing and habitat degradation in riverine and coastal areas. The Committee has prioritised threats that are within its resourcing capacity and scope of influence over the next 10 years, and commits to regularly review these priorities.